COAL FAMINE IS FEARED

Dealers Are Short on Fuel and Transportation on the Railroads Slow.

(Special to The Herald-Republican.) Ogden, Dec. 17.-Through the failure of the railroad companies to supply enough of the dealers ran entirely out of coal yesterday.

The mines at Rock Springs and other points are turning out an average of 402 tons of coal a day, but the railroad companies are unable to supply a sufficient amount of cars to transport the coal.

While the dealers in the city have so far been able to supply the demand, they are advising all parties to order several weeks in advance, and unless something is done by the railroad companies soon in the way of providing more cars, a coal shortage worse than that of last year will strike the city.

EXTREME POVERTY CALLS FOR WORK FROM COUNTY

(Special to The Herald-Republican.) Ogden, Dec. 17.-Sheriff Barlow Wilson and County Commissioner O. P. Madsen visited several of the poverty-stricken families whose plight had been reported families whose plight had been reported to them today, and found many instances of abject poverty.

In one case a widow with nine children was found living in a one-room shanty, without any food or coal, and suffering terrible misery from the cold.

Wherever possible, temporary relief was given, and during the Christmas holidays two tons of coal will be distributed among the poor families of the city. In addition to this, food will be given out, and no really deserving family in destitute circumstances will be overlooked.

Mantua and Brigham City Are Locking Horns Over Vexed Problem.

(Special to The Herald-Republican.) Brigham, City, Dec. 17 .- At a meeting of the city council the matter of city was considered. A number of citizens of this city and Mantua have purchased large tracts of land on the bench east of the city with the view of transferring certain water rights from the town at the hend of the canyon to the land east of this city. It appears that the town of Mantua owns appears that the town of Mantua owns a certain percentage of the flow of Box Elder creek, which, it has been demonstrated by tests made by the city engineer, seeps back into the creek, thereby giving Brigham City the benefits derived by such seepage.

The company wanting the transfer intends to divert the water at this end of the canyon and thereby Brigham City would lose the seepage. The city rewould lose the seepage. The city re-fuses to allow the transfer to be made present. The committee on irriga-on reported on a petition that the mmittee had received from Heber Walker of Mantua, stating that it was the unanimous opinion at Mantua that the city should resist any and all at-tempt to transfer the water from Mantua to this city for private purposes, and recommended that the petition for transfer be denied. The matter of the franchise of the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company, which has been under consideration for some time, was again deferred until a near future meeting. A committee was appointed to consider the matter of salaries and wages of city employees and appointive officers. From a source which may be accepted as worthy of the highest belief, it may be said, however, that the authorities well know how and why Steinheil was nurdered, and how Mme. Japy, foster nother of Mme. Steinheil, came to her death the same night. The name of former President Faure, well known admirer of the Steinheil woman, is of course mentioned, but it is known that the woman had no direct BATTLESHIP UTAH TO hand in the killing of her husband.

Facts in the Case.

The simple facts are that Steinheil and his wife and Mme. Japy, being Jews, naturally sided with the Dreyfusites when that event convulsed France, and President Faure, who was on terms of the greatest intimacy with Mme, Steinheil, wrote her letters about the Dreyfus case, in which his personal views, and those of others high in offi- SOME OF THE ASTOR

Although England has always been held up as a paragon in the matter of kindness to animals, yet in the case of its wornout horses there is less consideration shown, by far, than in France I sat in the Avenue des Champs Elysees last Sunday and counted the number of poorly kept and neglected ani-mals in cabs and other conveyances taking the crowd to the races or out to the Bois, and out of 113 horses, only five were worn out or even badly groomed. An Englishman said today, in explanation of the difference between English and French public horses, that the latter are used as meat by the public, and that as England does not esteem horse meat as highly as France, horses in Albion are killed when useless. Without entering into argument on this question, it may be said that in many meat shops in Paris may be seen apparently succulent horseflesh roasts and chops, decorated with flowers and placed on marble slabs. Garlands of sausages are also often seen. The sale of this horseflesh is regulated by the municipal authorities, and subject to
